"When the war began the situation changed. Even though there are those two parties, differing as to the advisability of ending the war under present ricumentance, both would be united if the Japanese domands wounded the amour proper of the Russian people or joopardised their future as a nation. I am sure that if I report that the conditions of Japan cannot be agreed to Russia will accept the variety, and the Russian people will be ready to continue the war for years if necessary. Russia is not crushed, as the foreign Press has led the world to believe. That the internal situation is very serious I do not deay, but in Europe and America the true significance of what is happening in not understood.

"Russia has little resemblance to Western countries. To know Russia, to understand the "Russia has little resemblance to Western countries. To know Russia, to understand the soul of the Russian people, it is necessary that one should have been born here or lived for many years in Russia. The outoms, history, and character of the people are extreey different from those of Western nations, at a Russian cannot be jedged by Western standards. It is such an immunes country, and is composed of such diverse elements and interests. Yes if The Russian people is like a great family at present torn with internal dissensions. But the dissensions will disappear should the people really feel that the integrity of the country, its historical future and desting, "Russia in not on the verge of dissolution as a great Power, and is not obliged to accept any conditions offered, in spite of the military reverses abe has sustained. It is difficult for any foreign observer to agree with the Russian stateman on the question of the possibility of continuing the present conflict. The dissensions that at present agitate the country are to disappear when once the people feel that Russia's fature is at stake, but we cannot help thinking that among a people of ideals—and idealists all Slave are—the acoid revolution, the nationalisation of land, the abolition of autoreary or even the formation of a new Russia. all slaws are—the scoils revolution, the nationalisation of land, the sholtion of surfocesoy, or even the formation of a new Russia on federal lines, in fact any of the panceses so vigorously recommended to Russia by ourhome Press and as a rule so sternly discouraged by it in the case of our Empire, may appeal just as strongly to the individual as the Imperialistic or National ideal. No considerations of Russias' insvitable loss of previlege prevented the mutinous crew of the Russian fleet, and no personal or public considerations prevented or prevent Count Tolstoi from doing his tumost to prevent recording during a disastrons foreign war. We admit that Russia is not beaten: in the some in which Prance was beaten in 1870, but she does not passess the financial resources of her ally and her very beaten in 1870, but she does not passess the financial resources of her ally and her very bulk would make it almost impossible for her to devote her whole attention to the war. In our opinion the best chance of peace lies in the fact that Russia must realise that every day of war in the Far East makes her less and less capable of using her traditional in-fluence nearer home. # COMMERCIAL AGREEMENT CONCLUDED.

Yesterday's "Official Journal" contains correspondence relating to the conclusion of a commercial agreement between Expty and Montenegro. In a letter dated March 30, 1905, M. V. G. Voucovitch, Moutenegrin Minister for Foreign Affairs, informs the Egyptian Minister for Foreign Affairs in that the Montenegrin Government is anxious to give the necessary stability to the commercial transactions between the two countries by the conclusion of a treaty of commerce and navigation. While the terms of such a treaty were being studie the Egyptian Givernment would perhaps agree with the Montenegrin in considering that a provisional arrangement on the basis of the most-favoured nation clause would be of great advantage to both countries.

THE COTTON WORM.

The weekly official report issued by the Ministry of the Interior on the work which is being done for the destruction of the cotton worm shows for the week ending 32nd inst not only a general and distinct decrease in the number of areas which have been attacked, but also that the cotton cultivations of the also that the ootton cultivations of three provinces, namely, Payoum, Minich, and Beni-Ronef, which had suffered previously, have during the last week remained entirely free of the worm. During the preceding week 27,026 feddeas were in all attacked in those provinces, so that theon-appearance of the worm through-out last week may be taken as an indication that these provinces have been entirely cleaned of it, and its re-appearance is regarded as improbable.

NEDWET EL ASSAL.

NEDWET EL ASSAL.

The Nedwet el Assal has appeared in various cotton cultivations but active stops are being taken for its destruction.

Many of our readers will doubtless remember that in a note which was published by the Ministry of the Interior the Nedwet el Assal was described as a certain acoty fragues which are attracted by a stickly kind of housy-dew deposited on the cotton leaves by small green midges, known as Aphis, which attack the cotton plant at this timp of year. It will be useful to recall this method by which the Aphis may be killed.

The plants are sprayed with a very fine spraying meshine, with an emission made of i roul toop, I gallon water, 2 gallons knowness and to this its added 25 times the belle of water. The 4 roll scap in cet up and bolied in the ong gallon of water, until completely dissolved, it is then taken off the first, the two gallons of kerosene are added, the whole is vigorously stirred, and upon the addition of 35 times the bulk of water it is ready for spraying on the leaves of the plant. Special attacution should be paid to the under surface of the Lawre, which is unasily attacked by the inpact. It is Important to note that the Aphia useally appears on the borders of the cotton fields near drains and water courses, and also that spraying should be done early in the morning or in the evening.

EGYPTIAN EXPLORATIONS.

"THE OLDEST MASTERS,"

BY W. ST. C. BOSCAWEN.

At the magic touch of the spade there rise from their graves, beneath the sandy robe of centuries, not kings and other mighty dead alone, but chapters of history long lost, and schools of art whose teaching has influenced all time. This marvellous resurrection of the past is amply illustrated by the splendid exhibition of antiquities from the famour Deirel-Bahr hill, near Thebes, which has been organised by the Egyptian Exploration Fund, in their rooms at 37, Great Rassell-street. More than ten years ago Professor Naville began the great task of exeavating the half-buried runs of the great temple of Hastispean, the Einzabeth of Egypt, built about 1s. 0.1530, and all who have visited Thebes know how successfully the work has been excomplished and the excellent manner in which portions have been restored. Unique in design, it was the custom to attribute this in many respects non-Egyptian building to some foreign influence, but that this war not the case is now proved by the important exavations which have been conducted by Professor Naville, seasied by Mr. H. R. Hall, of the British Maseum, and Mr. Aryton. To the south of the great temple of the eighteenth dynasty was a huge heap of debris and sand dirft. In this mound excavations were obrought to light the remains of a richly-decorated morteasty chaped of Mantheletp III., of the Great where the conditions of Mantheletp III., of the eleventh dynasty, p. 2500, and the tombs of queens and royal favorries attached to the temple. BY W. ST. C. BOSCAWEN B.c. 2500, and the tombs of queens and roya of Mentubetep III., of the eleventh dynasty, 18... 2500, and the tombs of queens and royal favorites attached to the temple.

The period of the eleventh dynasty was a blank in Egypt's story, and nothing was known of its art, the earliest remains hitherto from Thebea being those of the time of the twelfth dynasty. The beautiful sculptures now exhibited show that Mentubetep waged war in Syria and Sinai, and the well-drawn and coloured slabs representing these campaigns show us clearly the ethnic type of these neighbours of the Egyptians. It is with the temple and its decorations we are chiefly interested, and there is much material here to nature its. The fine series of plans and photographs exhibited show the construction of the building. The name of the temple was known to us as Akhaust — "Glorious are its seats"—and it appears to have consisted of a small pyramid surrounded by a colonande soultpured with beautiful senses.

The exhibits in this collection show that:

have consisted of a small pyramid surrounded by a colonnade sculptured with beautiful senses.

The exhibits in this collection show that we have to deal with a most important period in the history of Egyptian art. The old school of Memphis had died out at the time of the fall of the Sixth Dynasty, and in the work of this temple of Hathor, built by Mentuhetap, we see the reasonce of Egyptian art in this early Tebans school. The variation in 2-jules very noticeable when we compare these sculptures with the fire examples of dynastics IV, to VI, on exhibition in the Egyptian anner of the British Museum.
The old low relief, delicately finished, has given place to a style of high modelled work, carefully finished and coloured, and perhaps the best examples here are the two portraits of King Mentuhetep III. (Tab. C., 1-5); also a beautiful portrait of the princase-priestess of Hathor, Nefer Shushaus. The best work in this collection comes from the tombs of the priestesses of Hathor, which were found on the north and west sides of the temple, and especially fine are the fragments of the coffin of the Negro priestess Kennit, which are the more valuable because much of the work is unfinished, showing the technical methods of production. Espécially should be noticed the close attention to detail in some of the small fragments. A representation of methods of production. Especially should be noticed the close attention to detail in some of the small fragments. A representation of the King wearing the Alti or White Crown, shows that the lower portion was made of linen, the two top tiers bound with bands of gold being of sine plaited straw or grass to give resultation, and affording as the earliest example of the straw hat. Equally fine is the finished work on the small slab-representing the winged solar disk supported by two cobras. Every feather of the winge, and each scale of the serpent's skin is finished with the most minute care. There are also some most valuable fragments representing hunting and fishing scenes, and the thraving and colouring of the low relief work is excellent. Take the group of two hippopotant. All these examples both the condition of the control of the c ments. In the Louve in Paris there is the memorial tablet of a sculptor-artist named Mertisen, who lived in the reign of this King Mertabetep III., and who thus speaks of his artistic abilities: "I am a workman akilled in his craft, who by reason of his knowledge has risen above all others. I know how to dopic the motion of a limh. I know how to draw the gait of a man and the carriage of a woman." In the works of art in this room we see those which came from the hand or design of Merti-sen, and as we look upon them we must admit than his remarks, egotistical as they may seem, are justifiable. This ancient Theban Michael Angelo, for he was both painter and sculptor. are justifiable. This ancient Theban Michael 'Angelo, for he was both painter and soulptor, had a talented son named Usertseen, of whom his father says. "I have seen the productions, his beautiful work in precious stones of every kind, and in gold and silver and ebony." Sur-ly in this carver and jiswaller we sike see the Cellini of, forty-four centuries ego. It is curious to notice that as in the case of this Eleventh Dynasty temple (a.c. 2500) we know the chief architect, artists, and ceratumen, so also we know the grander fano of Hatshegen, built a thousand years later, was the product of the skill of Semunt, the subinets at Pluhti-the master-trafuman. Surely these are indeed our oldest masters, and no true student of ancient art, should miss this opportunity to study these specimens of their work. Whatover doubts may have existed as to portraiture in Egyptian, art, they are certainly dispelled by the three three-quarter life statues of Usertieen III, which represent him in his youth, middle sige, and old age. No one can dony the truthfuliases of the portrait, and fail to see how well the artist has depicted the ravages of time. Dynasty temple (R.C. 2500) we know the chief architect, artists, and craftsmen, so also we fail to see how well the actist has depicted the ravages of time.

There are many interesting exhibits of monuments of the later dynasties, one of the finest being a marble head of the sacred Hather cow, the eyes of which have been inlaid with lapis laroli and the horns probably of silver or go'd. Especially beautiful is the limestone head of a priestess of Amen. In conclusion, we may certainly say this is one of the best, if not the best, exhibitions that the Egyptian Exploration Fund has ever held. And a word of special praise is due to the estalogue.

THE BLACK MAN'S PERIL

Those who claim that civilisation has a degenerating effect upon the black man will find much to confirm them in their opinion in the recently issued Natal Blue-book on Native Affairs. Thrown in the towas into "the cauldron of conflict, the never ending intercourse between Europeans and natives," as one of the magistrates describes it, the native develops independence without being detected to the responsibilities which the transaction demands. The result is alwessmess and degeneracy.

The First Assistant Magistrate of Durban, where there are nineteen thousand natives, goes very fully into the question in a report to the Department of Native Affairs. During their residence in towas they acquire, he points out, all sorts of experience, most of it of questionable value, because perpetually missunderatord, and they assume airs which would be grotesque were they not so grave in character. Those who claim that civilisation has grotesque were they not so grave in character. The consequence is that when they go back to the kraals their influence has a deteriorating The consequence is that when they go back to the krash their influence has a deteriorating moral effoct. Formerly, in visiting the chief of a tries, the right course was to seek admission at the gate of the krasl, leaving sticks and weapons there. "Nowadays," says the magistrate, "youths and others march straight to the upper or principal huts, and personally press for immediate admission. Formerly elderly may were treated with the utmost respect by their juniors; now, owing to the influence of Boropean civilisation, one will hear a son, who has just arrived from a spell of service in the lower, exclasin, when his father attempts to obrrect him: "I won't submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results in the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose were a submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a Khafir, whose results and the submit to any nonsense from a consense from a consens submit to any nonsense from a Khaffir, who are you to speak to me in they swear at relatives, male and female, in the filthiest English. Native habits and cus-

Native habits and contours are being undermined to a surprising diggree, and as the result of our o'rillasprising diggree, and as the result of our o'rillasprising diggree, and as the result of our o'rillasprising diggree, and as the result of our magnitude. Greater set the sun diggree of the magnitude considers, offers no parallel. The conditions are essentially different. The negator are essentially different. The negro of the States, haling from many countries, is entirely cut off from his traditions, his language, habits, and costoms, whereas in Natal the natives occupy the hand their accostors possessed, and are not in any appreciable degree out off from the past. It is because of this fundamental difference that "though universally admitted to be entitled to evjoy the naterial advantages of Western civilisation, the natives of Natal should not be societted liberties, which, as many of their European friends can see, are alowly but surely bringing about their annihilation. Some, pointly, will be surprised to learn that under the native system of life the principle of labor was made the greatest are of in governing the people. Under Thakas, for instance, no young man or woman durat many whicher the King's consent. Recruited as boys, regiments were not accorded the right to marry until after the members had reached forty years of age, while girls also oderted into casses were obliged to remain single far beyond the ages at which they are accusated to marry until difference to the Silisi-intered the interference the Silisi-intered the sufference to the Silisi-intered to the sufference to the Silisi-

as which they are accustomed to marry nowdays."

The Acting Magistrate in the Lower Tugels district, in his reference to the Illicit supply of liquor, says regular "sirishminyans" (drink) parties are got up amongst the natives. The invitation is by means of a white flag suspended to a bamboo or other logs pole placed in the most commanding position near the festire kraal. The idea is that a "mitimbs," or bride's party, has arrived, and the young people enter the but, drink is handed round, and revelry region supreme, the older people being denied admission.

Soperstition has still a great hold upon the natives. A ceansa, the first that has ever been taken, was recently carried out. The natives were exceeding nervous about the whole matter, considering that the counting of the people would be followed by disaster. In most districts the considering that the counting of the constitution of the constitution of the constitution of the constitution of the consus was held to be directly responsible by the natives, and great was the lamptation, as it was firmly believed that the epidemic would result in the extinction of the rose. The consus show, of that, including Zulland, there are 104,642 are still nade to propitate the spirits of the departed, and during last year over a thousand licences were issued to native medicine men and herbalists.

PAUL JONES.

HIS LIFE AND ADVENTURES.

I Last weel: Paris witnersed the unusual spectacle of an armed American force marching through its streets. It was, however, merely a psecoable mission in the form of an escort of Blerjackst and Marines arriving to take charge of the supposed remains of the "Pounder of the American Navy," which have lately been discovered, and are to be removed to the United States in the flagship Brooklyn. Oahn Paul Jones, to give the distinguished naval adventure his correct aname, was the youngest son of John Paul, a gardener, and was born in Kirkbaan, Kirk and Charles and the states of the states Last weel: Paris witnessed the unusual spec When in 1777, the American Marine Com shased him for some time. Where, in 1777, the American Marine Committee decided to attack British trade in British waters. Paul Jones was selected for the important enterprise. In command of the Ranger, a new frigate-built ship of 18 guns, he soon began to instill some terror into garts of the coast of Scotland and Ireland, and did some damage at Whitehaven. At Kircedbright it was his intention to kidnay the Earl of Selkirk and hold him as a hortage; but the Earl happening to be absent, the crew plundered his house and carried ofl some valuable plate, which Jones bought from them and gallantly returned to Lady Selkirk. In 1778, bearing that the British aloop Drake, 20 gens, Commander George Burdon, was at anabor in Carrick-fargus Bay, he made a bold and well-conceived, but u "successful, attempt to board her. He sforwards encountered the English aloop on the 22th April, when, after a fight of saventy-four minutes, she was forced to strike to her skilfully-handled and well-fought encounty. The Americana naturally made a good deal of this success, but, though the two ships were nominally of equal force, the English ship was badly manued and unprepared. In spite of these successes, it was not until the middle of 1719 that Captain Jones was able to get another squadron to see. He then fitted out under the American flag, and was able to get another squadron to sea. He then fitted out, under the American flag, an was also to get amongs squators to sea. Its then fitted out, under the American ling, an old East Indianan, the Due de Duras, said to be capable of mounting torty gens. When ready for ses, with her mame changed to Le Bonhoume Richard, the ship and guns, crew and all, were of the most makeshirt character. She was a dull sailer, old and rotten her gens wern out; and the majority of her crew loaders and outcast. As consorts she had the Allianos, a 33'gun fraigate, the Pallas, of 30 guns; an ex-merchantman, the Vengeance, also an armed merchantman of 12 guns, and the 18'gun cutter Cerf. Not-withstanding a good deal of trouble with his captain, Paul Jones's squadron created wild alarm in Great Britain, and by the end of September had taken seventeen ships.

On the 33rd September a great fleet came in sight. It was the Baltic trade, conveyed by His Majesty's frigate Serapis, of forty-four guns, Captain Richard Fearson, and the armed ship. Countees of Scothorough, a for west, Commender Thomas Piercy. The cliffs of Scarborough and the coast of Flamborough Head were covoided with spectators, who were to be rewarded by the sight of one of the finestights in history; one, however, which space will not admit of describing here in detail. The Countees of Scarborough, after a fight of two hours, struck to the French-American Fallas, while the Serapis, after a splendid fight, kept up with unnessal obtinacy, for three and shalf hours, struck to Faul Jones' ship. The loss on board such ship was very heavy. Captain Pearson handed down his flag just as the one of the struck of the such postant parts. old East Indiaman, the Duc de Duras, ap with unusual obstinacy, for three and a-half hours, struct to Paul Jones's ship. The loss on board each ship was very heavy. Captain Pearson hasled down his flag just as the mainmast went overboard. The Americans took possession of their prine, transferred to her the crew of the Bonhomme Richard, which had been very bedly knocked about, and sank a day later. The fight was a pleedid one. But it must be schooledged the Britisher was fairly taken by practically an inferior ship handled by an exceptionally able and skilful esptain. The convoy, however, made good its esseps, and Jones, after further troubles and adventures, arrived in Philadelphis on the 18th February 1781, which was the end of his service in the American Navy. He appears to have served in the French Navy for a year, until the poses in 1785, and some five years later bocame a rear-admiral in the Russian service. He was present, in command of a division of the fleet, but had no scitive shars, in the decisive battle in the Liman in 1788. He died in Paris on the 18th July, 1792, in the forty-sixth year of his age, and there his remains have since rested. There is little to admire in the private life of John Paul Jones. He was, by all accounts, mean and selfah, and of inby all accounts, mean and selfish, and of in pirate, and smuggler, he was a traitor to his own country, and prepared to serve any of her enemies who paid him sufficiently well. But there can be no doubt that he was talented and original, that he possessed determined courage, and that he was a splendid seaman,

AN ALGERIAN REBEL.

An interesting figure associated with a stir-ring episode of the history of the colony has passed away in Algeria. El Mokrani, the leader of the Arab rising of 1871, has just died at the age of 75, twelve months after the pardot which permitted him to return to his hom from New Caledonia. Sentenced to death fo from New Caledonia. Sentenced to death for his revolt, the punishment was commented to transportation for life, and Ri Mokrani spent more than 30 years in the penal colony. He was not in confinement, however. Most of that period was spent as a horse dealer, for an Arab knows by instinct the points of a horse, and when the natives, whom he despited, rose in insurrection as he himself had once done, he organised his fellow Arab exites into a little body of horse sgaint them, and rode one last charge in the service of that France against which he had formerly rebelled. This loyally it was which finally won his pardon, and he had died at the home of his son in the land of his fathers.

COTTON OPERATIVES' DEMAND.

The operative spinners and card-room workers in the various cotton centres of Lancashire last week served on their camployers a month's notice of an application for a 5 per cent. advance of wages, which the amployers refused to concede at the joint conference held recently. Daring the month the operatives will be asked by heliot to express their opinion span this action on the part of their Executive Committee, and there seems to be no doubt that the requisite four fifths' majority in favor of the executive's action will be secured. In cortion circles in Manchester the opinion is held that the dispute will be settled aminably, an important consideration in the position from the operative's joint of view being that trade is exceedingly brink in Lancashire just now, and mill owners will prefer to concede a point or two rather than suffer the loss that would follow the obtaing of the mills and the consequent inability to complete orders.
